When you would run this as a cohort

The Cash Certified Teacher PD is built async-first — a single teacher can complete it solo in 2 hours with full rigor. But there are three situations where running it as a cohort adds real value:

1. New-program adoption. A district adopting Cash to Company K-12 across multiple grade bands wants their teaching staff to share a vocabulary and a calibration baseline by the start of the school year.

2. Returning-staff annual refresh. A school that has run Cash to Company for a year and wants its veterans to re-norm against the voice rules, the sensitivity protocols, and any updates from the summer change log.

3. Mixed-experience onboarding. A school adding new teachers to an existing program wants those new teachers to enter at the same calibration as the veterans — not to discover they're scoring two rubric steps apart in November.

In any of these cases, a cohort facilitator (you) runs the PD across 1–3 sessions with structured peer interaction. The async modules + activities + quiz are still the spine; the cohort layer is added on top.

Three cohort formats

FORMAT A — SINGLE-DAY INTENSIVE (4 HOURS)

Compressed format. Teachers complete the PD in a single PD day with you facilitating live. Lunch is included.

Time	What
8:30	Welcome + pre-survey (5 min: "what do you most need from today?")
8:45	Module 01 individual read (20 min)
9:05	Activity 1 + 2 in pairs (15 min)
9:20	Whole-cohort debrief: the 30-word brand promise (10 min)
9:30	Module 02 individual read (20 min)

Time	What
9:50	Activity 3 + 4 in pairs (20 min)
10:10	Break (10 min)
10:20	Module 03 individual read (20 min)
10:40	Activity 5 + 6 individual + reveal (15 min)
10:55	Whole-cohort debrief: voice failure modes (10 min)
11:05	Module 04 individual read (20 min)
11:25	Activity 7 in pairs — role-play (15 min)
11:40	Lunch (45 min)
12:25	Module 05 individual read (20 min)
12:45	Activity 9 + 10 in pairs (20 min)
13:05	Module 06 individual read (20 min)
13:25	Activity 11 — calibration in pairs (30 min)
13:55	Activity 12 — Family Visit Day plan (15 min)
14:10	Certification quiz (25 min, individual)
14:35	Self-score + peer-score (15 min)
14:50	Sensitivity Pledge signing + certificate distribution (15 min)
15:05	Close + photos + commitment-pair pairings for Year 1 (15 min)
15:20	End

Pros: done in a day. Cohort feel. Calibration done together. Cons: intense; risk of fatigue; quiz scores trend lower under time pressure.

FORMAT B — 3-WEEK COHORT (60 MINUTES/WEEK + ASYNC BETWEEN)

Spaced format. Teachers do the async modules at home and meet with you for 60 minutes a week to debrief and run the higher-leverage activities together.

Week	Async (between meetings)	60-min meeting
1	Modules 01 + 02 + Activities 1–4	Debrief modules 1+2; run Activity 5 (Voice-Band-Spotting) together

Week	Async (between meetings)	60-min meeting
2	Module 03 + Activity 6, Module 04 + Activity 7	Debrief; run Activity 8 (Sensitivity Sort) together; cohort role-play
3	Module 05 + Activity 9, 10; Module 06 + Activity 12	Run Activity 11 (Calibration) together; take Quiz; signing + photos

Pros: lower fatigue, better quiz scores, cohort builds across the weeks. Cons: logistics; some teachers don't do the async work.

FORMAT C — SUMMER COHORT (5 DAYS, 25 MINUTES/DAY)

Distributed format. Teachers do one module + activities per day for five mornings of pre-school PD week. Day 6 is the quiz + Family Visit Day planning session.

Day	What
Mon	Modules 01 + 02 + activities + 25-min cohort debrief
Tue	Module 03 + activities + 25-min voice drill
Wed	Module 04 + activities + 25-min role-play cohort
Thu	Module 05 + activities + 25-min scaffold-share
Fri	Module 06 + activities + 25-min calibration
Mon (next week)	Quiz + sensitivity-pledge signing + Year-1 commitment pairs

Pros: matches typical pre-school PD week. Cons: spans a weekend; momentum risk.

Discussion prompts (use in any format)

These are the prompts that work in cohort. They surface the productive disagreements without inflaming them. Use one or two per cohort meeting.

Module 01 prompt:

> "What's the strongest pull you feel — when describing the program — to slide toward hype-language? Where does it come from? (Your own school's marketing? A parent's expectation? A district admin's language?)"

Module 02 prompt:

> "Which of the four moves is hardest in your real classroom — and why?" (Most common answers: 'measurable outcome,' because state standards are written fuzzy; 'concrete first,' because the textbook leads with definitions.)

Module 03 prompt:

> "Which banned phrase have you used most often, before reading the list? What will replace it?"

Module 04 prompt (handle with care):

> "What's a sensitivity scenario you've already navigated — without naming any kid by identifying detail?" (Some teachers will share painful past experiences. Hold space; don't probe; redirect to the script.)

Module 05 prompt:

> "Pick a real student in your class. Name the differentiation you're already doing — and the one you'll add this year."

Module 06 prompt:

> "What grading drama have you experienced before — when colleagues scored differently? How did you resolve it?"

Peer-pair structures

Cohort PD's strongest move is structured peer pairing. Three pair structures that work:

PAIR STRUCTURE 1 — CALIBRATION PARTNER

Pair two teachers from the same grade band. They commit to running the calibration protocol (Activity 11 + Module 06) before any Capstone Defense day across the year. Schedule the first calibration on the cohort day so they have it in their calendar.

PAIR STRUCTURE 2 — CROSS-BAND PARTNER

Pair two teachers from different grade bands (e.g., a 2nd-grade teacher with a 7th-grade teacher). They commit to one cross-band classroom visit per semester. The lower-grade teacher learns where their students are headed; the higher-grade teacher learns what their students arrived from. The visit is 20 minutes; the debrief is 10 minutes; the value compounds.

PAIR STRUCTURE 3 — VOICE PARTNER

Pair two teachers who will text each other a "voice-slip" of the week — a moment they caught themselves slipping into hype, flattery, or moralizing. The text is the catch. No analysis required. The catch alone re-norms the voice.

Follow-up coaching cadence

Certification is the start, not the end. Plan three follow-up coaching touches across the school year.

TOUCH 1 — SEPTEMBER CHECK-IN (30 MINUTES PER TEACHER)

In the first three weeks of school, observe each newly certified teacher in their classroom for 20 minutes. Score against the 4-pedagogy-move checklist. Debrief for 10 minutes. Most common feedback at this touch: "you slipped into hype-language at the close." That's expected. Catching it early prevents a year of drift.

TOUCH 2 — JANUARY COHORT MEETING (60 MINUTES)

Mid-year. The cohort meets again. Each teacher brings one Capstone artifact from their classroom and a 2-minute reflection on what's working and what isn't. You run a 30-minute calibration on the artifacts. The cohort re-norms.

TOUCH 3 — MAY COHORT CELEBRATION (60 MINUTES)

End-of-year. Each teacher shares the strongest student artifact from the year and the misstep they're proudest of catching. You celebrate. You share the summer change log preview. You confirm renewal calendars.

What to do when a teacher pushes back on the rules

You will encounter pushback. The most common forms:

1. "I want to be able to celebrate kids." Validate. Then specify: "Celebrate the moves, not the outcomes. 'You named two customers and got both their reactions on paper — that's exactly the move' is a celebration. 'You're going to crush it!' is a slip."

2. "The free-PD language is fine — schools love it." Quote the brand voice guide. Cite the rule's date. Explain: the rule is locked because the program's value isn't its price tag. Marketing the price short-changes the substance.

3. "I have to talk about my own family money to make the lessons real." Validate. Then redirect: "Use neutral hypotheticals. Sample Family A. Hermione's monthly expenses. The federal poverty line for a family of three. Your family's specifics aren't a useful teaching tool — they're personal."

4. "My students will think the program is boring without hype." Disagree directly. Hype is the floor; substance is the ceiling. The kids who roll their eyes at hype-bro language are the ones we are here to reach. Cash to Company is built so the substance does the lifting.

5. "I disagree with one of the banned phrases." Hear them out. Then hold the rule. The banned list is locked at the program level; individual teacher disagreement doesn't reopen it. If they want to advocate for a change, point them at the brand voice guide's review-and-update process.

What success looks like, six months in

A school running this PD as a cohort, with the three follow-up touches, should see:

- 90% of newly certified teachers passing the quiz at 80%+ on first attempt.
- Teacher language norming in faculty meetings (you'll hear "which people, and how do you know?" come up in unrelated conversations by November).
- Calibration scores converging across the cohort (under 1 rubric step difference on 80% of Capstone artifacts by January).
- Sensitivity escalations going to the right channels (when a kid discloses a hardship, the teacher routes through the school counselor — not by writing it into the lesson).
- Family Visit Day pulling more parents than the school's other curriculum events. (The Cash arc gives parents something to ask about. They show up.)

If you're not seeing these by January, run the January cohort meeting deeper. Three hours, not one. Re-run Activity 11 with fresh artifacts. Re-norm.

A final note on what the cohort is for

The cohort is not for the teachers who would have done the PD anyway, alone, perfectly. They'll still do well alone. The cohort is for the teacher who would have skimmed the PD, slipped into hype-language by November, and called a parent in March about a Capstone score that didn't match a colleague's. The cohort is the safety net that prevents that. Build it deliberately.

The kids you teach will be a little less wrong, every week. The cohort is what keeps the teachers a little less wrong, every week, too.

One promise.

The cohort is the safety net that keeps teachers a little less wrong, every week, too.

Cash to Company is built so a curriculum coordinator, a foundation officer, a parent, or a teacher can pick up any one of these strategic references and meet the program at full strength on the first page.

No promise of wealth. No probing of family finances. No partisan content. One question, asked patiently for thirteen years: which people, and how do you know?
